AERA

The headquarter of the company Ottobock is located in Duderstadt, Lower Saxony. As the world market leader in prosthetics, Ottobock has stood for innovative products for prostheses, orthoses, wheelchairs and exoskeletons for over 100 years. At the headquarter of the global player, research and work is done every day for a mobile life. A building that is a perfect place for our carpet AERA from ANKER.

Since the late 1940s, the medical technology company has been headquartered in the historic Eichsfeld region, where it is considered one of the most important employers and economic drivers in the region. A wide range of innovative "wearable human bionics" such as microprocessor-controlled knee joints and computer-controlled leg orthoses are developed here and are used in countless countries. Always with the aim to empower people.

In addition to various development and production facilities, Duderstadt also houses the company's main administration building, which was recently modernized, renovated and redesigned in terms of interior design. For this, the interior designers chose AERA, a carpet from ANKER. The carpet perfectly underlines the value of the individual rooms. The discreet and at the same time high-quality grey (colour 508) integrates itself skillfully into the entire interior and blends perfectly with the existing glass walls and fronts.

The carpeting was used in the form of a strip covering a total area of around 2,000 m².
